Hollywood seeks pension reform through public referendum

Got your attention? You don't have to look too far to see what efforts are being made to change public pensions. This is a nationwide issue and you should be monitoring this closely and stay ahead of the curve!

Rebuffing the myth! San Antonio Fire and Police Pension Fund, City of Austin Employees' Retirement System and Houston Municipal Employees Pension System retained Pension Trustee Advisors, Inc. to compare the costs and benefits of a defined benefit plan to the costs and benefits of a defined contribution plan, applying data relevant to the subject plans. (A research paper in 2008 entitled "A Better Bang for the Buck" compared the costs and benefits of a typical DB plan with the costs and benefits of a typical DC plan, based on a hypothetical group of employees. Worries about retirement security abound. Governments are concerned about delivering on the promises they have made to their citizens and to their employees, as tax revenues shrink amid a weakening economy. In this environment, some have proposed replacing traditional DB pensions with 401(k)-type DC retirement savings plans in an effort to save money. The value of traditional DB pensions to employees is generally recognized: they provide a secure, predictable retirement income that cannot be outlived. But less well known is the value of a DB pension to an employer. Due to their group nature, DB plans possess "built-in" savings, which make them highly efficient retirement income vehicles, capable of delivering retirement benefits at a low cost to the employer and employee.

These savings derive from three principal sources:

First, DB plans better manage longevity risk, or the chance of running out of money in retirement. By pooling longevity risks of large numbers of individuals, DB plans avoid the "over-saving" dilemma -- that is, saving more than people need on average to avoid running out of cash -- that is inherent in DC plans. Consequently, DB plans are able to do more with less.

Second, because DB plans, unlike the individuals in them, do not age, they are able to take advantage of the enhanced investment returns that come from a balanced portfolio throughout an individual's lifetime.

Third, DB plans, which are professionally managed, achieve greater investment returns as compared with DC plans that are made up of individual accounts. A retirement system that achieves higher investment returns can deliver any given level of benefit at a lower cost.

Because of these factors, the report found that a DB pension plan can offer the same retirement benefit at substantially less cost than the cost of a DC retirement savings plan. Specifically, the analysis indicated that for workers in the three Texas DB plans that were studied, the cost to deliver the same level of retirement income ranged from being 39% to 44% lower than the cost of a DC plan. The analysis clearly demonstrated that DB plans are far more cost-efficient than DC plans. To achieve target retirement benefit that will replace 46% to 86% of average salary, the three DB plans will require contributions ranging from 7.3% to 20.1% of payroll, whereas the DC plan will require contributions almost twice as high, ranging from 12.0% to 35.7% of payroll. And due to effects of longevity risk pooling, maintenance of portfolio diversification and greater investment returns over the lifecycle, a DB plan can provide the same level of retirement benefits at 56% to 61% of the cost of a DC plan.

COMPARING COMPENSATION OF STATE-LOCAL VERSUS PRIVATE SECTOR WORKERS

Center for State & Local Government Excellence has issued a new brief that compares compensation of state-local versus private sector workers. Decline in the funded status of pensions in the wake of the financial crisis has put state and local governments under great pressure just as their budgets were decimated as a result of the ensuing recession. The response all over the country has been to increase employee contributions, cut benefits for future employees and in some cases cut cost-of-living adjustments. To justify these changes, the story is that public employees are overpaid and their pensions are a particularly egregious example of that overpayment. At this point, observers generally agree that wages of similarly situated workers are lower in the state-local sector than in the private sector (about 9.5%). The disagreement hinges on the extent to which benefits offset the wage penalty. The Center's re-estimation of the much-used wage equation plus adjustments for proper valuation of pensions and retiree health insurance indicates a difference of about 4 percent in favor of private sector workers. In short, for the nation as a whole the difference between public and private sector compensation appears modest. The relatively modest differential should make policymakers cautious about massive changes without carefully studying specifics of their particular situation

FEW BABY BOOMERS FINANCIALLY PREPARED FOR RETIREMENT

They may long to give up their daily commutes and have wide-open schedules, but far too many baby boomers are largely unprepared to leave their jobs, according to benefitnews.com. Only 54% have tried to calculate a financial goal for retirement, just 45% have consulted with a financial planner and 43% do not consider themselves knowledgeable about making financial investments. When asked to name the most important feature of a retirement investment product, the number one trait was "guaranteed monthly income," selected by 18% of respondents, followed by rate of return (17%) and principal protection (15%). In terms of preparedness, the overall attitude of Boomers nearing retirement is pessimistic, with six out of 10 expressing concern about outliving their retirement savings. Seven out of 10 are afraid that their household is not saving enough to cover future needs, and more than one-third of pre-retirees indicate that they did not know the age at which they would retire.

DEFINE THE TERMS

This is not Jay Leno or Jimmy Kimmel..... The link below is a short video from Center for Retirement Research, at Boston College, in which people-on-the-street in Chicago are asked the meaning of everyday financial terms.
